1. Maintain Order: The king's administration would have issued charters to address local grievances, enforce laws, and quell any signs of unrest.
2. Royal Justice: The administration of justice remained a core function of the monarchy, and charters would have been issued to resolve disputes, grant pardons, and uphold the king's peace.
3. Church Relations: The relationship between the Crown and the Church was a significant factor in medieval governance. Charters might record royal grants to ecclesiastical institutions or interactions concerning church appointments and property.
